2009 Explorer Yearbook

Dedication

Grounded in a Love for His Students:

Brother Arthur Bangs

A man well-known for his wonderful ability to listen to students and to guide them, beloved Brother Arthur Bangs is the recipient of the 2009 Explorer Yearbook Dedication.

Fondly known as "Brother Art", this man embodies many of the qualities that illustrate what it truly means to be "Lasallian". He remembers the names of all he meets, frequently stopping to say hello, even if he is running to a class or other event. Brother Art is never too busy to listen to a student's problems or just have a conversation about movies, one of his favorite topics.

"He makes everyone feel special," said Associate Dean of Students, Dr. Lane Neubauer. "You're not one of many, you're the ONE when talking to Brother Art." Neubauer worked for 10 years alongside Brother Art in the Counseling Center.

Brother Art's career at La Salle began in 1949, graduating from the College Maxima Cum Laude with a B.A. in the Classics in 1953 and in 1954 with an M.A. in Theology. Since then, he has continued his education, receiving an M.A. in the Classics from the University of Pittsburgh in 1959, an M.A. and Ph.D. in Counseling from the Catholic University of America, as well as being licensed in Psychology in 1973.

Teaching at three schools, Central Catholic in Pittsburgh, Bishop O'Connell in Arlington, VA and St. John's College High School in Washington, Brother Art became well-known for his listening skills and guidance to students.

After teaching at these schools, Brother Art returned to his Alma Mater in 1969 to take a place in both the Counseling Center and the Education Department. From 1979-1982, Brother Art, with a passion for travel, directed the American College Program at the University of Fribourg in Switzerland, of which La Salle was an integral member.

In 2008, Brother Art retired from the Counseling Center, after touching the lives of hundreds of students. "Brother Art touches the heart of anyone he interacts with and brings out the best in people, even the most troubled of students. He leaves all students and anyone he works with feeling empowered," said Neubauer.

Brother Art continues touching the lives of students to this day, whether you meet him in Education class or simply walking across the campus. And you can bet, he will always give you a minute or 10 of his time.

Grounded through Progress

"Grounded through change" marks the 2008-2009 school year at La Salle.As the campus grows, expands and changes it is important to remember that La Salle is still simply La Salle. The traditions and values that make this university unique are still omnipresent.

However, every year, day and week st this school is different. No class, year or student is ever repetitous of the previous.

The Opening section of the yearbook represents the 2008-2009 school year. Within these pages marks a weekly event to spread justice, a historical presidential election and a long-awaited city championship.

It is these occurences along with many others that make 2009 "grounded through change."

Remembering A Professor

Beloved professor and director of the Honors Program, John Grady, passed away on Sunday, July 13, 2008. Grady took over as director of the Honors Program at La Salle in 1969 and worked hard for 39 years to enable the program to reach a high level of prestige and national recognition.

The love that Grady had for his students was limitless. He was easily accessible to his students, even when at home. He braved bad weather, walking to campus on occasion, to be available for students. Grady personally worked with every student in the Honors Program, helping them achieve their goals and welcoming them to La Salle.

Before taking the position as director of the Honors Program, Grady first came to La Salle in 1960. He was offered a temporary position in the Economics department by Dr. Joseph Flubacher. That "temporary" position lasted for over 40 years.

In those 40 years, Grady accomplished much at La Salle. He saw the Honors Program gain esteem among liberal arts schools. He received the Lindback Teaching Award in 1972 and was founding Chair of the Honors Assessment and Evaluation Committee of the National Collegiate Honors Council. In 2003, the Honors Program developed a scholarship named after him.

Perhaps the La Salle Honors Program has lost a valuable advisor and friend. However, all can be assured that the legacy John Grady left will be lived by the hundreds of students he mentored.

Changes in the Landscape

Construction continued into the 2008-2009 school year. First, and perhaps most noticeable, was the dismantling and renovating of Holroyd Hall. This Science Center was being completed upgraded throughout the year, adding more classrooms, better labs and "greening" the building.

Other changes to the campus landscape included work done in West Campus, the Germantown hospital. The entire nursing program was moved to West Campus, as were the science classrooms, temporarily, as Holroyd was renovated.

With this advent of classes moving across the campus, it became necessary for West Campus to somehow connect itself to the main campus. This was achieved in two ways. First, a pedestrian walkway was constructed, crossing Wister Street and allowing students a safe route over to West Campus. Second, once students crossed over the walkway, they entered the lobby of West Campus, which includes a glass atrium, security desk and lounge for students to use.

The Shoppes at La Salle, constructed in the former Good Shepherd parking lot, continued throughout the year resulting in the opening of various shops close to the campus for students to access. These shops included: Dunkin' Donuts, Rite Aid, Beneficial Bank, Gamestop among others.

Finally, the University purchased and opened a new pizza place, Explorers Den. This venue opened in June and offers students an alternative place to eat, as it accepts gold card.

Grounded in a Cause

Working Towards Social Equality

Social Justice Week 2008, October 5-12, was full of events that occurred campus-wide to promote awareness about the injustices within global society. Social justice is defined as "the distribution of the benefits and the hardships in society, together with the way they are allocated."

Social Justice Week at La Salle was designed to educate students about the injustices that occur within our own society, as well as international societies. The week was put together by senior Religion major, Chris McNabb in collaboration with UMAS and the Project on Social Justice.

The Honor's Convocation on Sunday, October 5 kicked off Social Justice Week. Throughout the course of the next five days, white paper lilies began to appear on the quad. The lilies represented the 392 murders that took place in the city of Philadelphia in the year 2007.

Big events that took place during the week included an AIDS discussion led by staff and faculty members Dr. Richard Mshomba, Professor Huntly Collins, Dr. William Price, Dr. Mark Ratkus, Professor Mary Wilby, and Dr. Jordan Copeland.

Requiem for Philadelphia also took place during Social Justice Week, which was a remembrance of those lost to violence in the city. The presentation was a multi-media endeavor that included performances by Neo-African Drums n' Dance. The week was a success, spreading the Christian Brothers' teaching of social justice to the entire La Salle community, and maybe, making a difference.

Celebrating World Champions

"The 0-2 pitch, swing and a miss! Struck him out! The Philadelphia Phillies are 2008 World Champions of baseball!"

Those were the words of beloved sports announcer, Harry Kalas on Wednesday, October 28. These words set a city on fire, ending a 28-year world title drought for the Philadelphia Phillies.

The 2008 season started out with high expectations for the Phillies, after they made it to the playoffs the previous year. Everyone was looking forward to the "Phightins" to come out strong.

And the Phillies did not disappoint their fans. May 30, 2008 was the turning point of the season, when the Phillies triumphed over the Florida Marlins to capture first place in the National League East. From that date on, the Philllies were in a season long battle to stay on top, alternately dueling the New York Mets or the Florida Marlins. And what a battle it was.

As the season drew to a close, it became apparent that the battle would really fall between the Mets and the Phillies. Could the Phils hold their National League East title?

After some nail biting games, the Philllies were able to triumph over the Mets, earning them a spot in the playoffs. After winning against the Brewers and the Dodgers in the playoffs, the Phils made it to the World Series as National League Champions. They took on the American League Champions, the Tampa Bay Rays to win the World Series, finally giving fans a parade down Broad Street.

Excersing the Right to Vote

As the primaries for the 2008 Election began winding down, it became clear that November 4, 2008 would be a historical day. Would the race line be erased, with the election of Barack Obama? Or would feminism get some assistance with Hillary Clinton taking the Oval Office? That decision was in the hands of the nation.

As the long primary season continued, Hillary Clinton eventually dropped out of the race, leaving Barack Obama as the Democratic candidate. In the coming months, Obama would square off with Republican candidate John McCain in debates, commercials and press time.

La Salle students in particular became immersed in the election for many reasons. For example, La Salle students worked for either campaign and planned events on campus to encourage voter participation.

Highlights from La Salle's participation in the election process include Political Science professor Mary-Ellen Balchunis' broadcast from the Democratic National Convention, Rock the Vote events and the visit to campus by Mayor Ed Rendell (D).

Rendell's visit to La Salle brought an all star lineup of visitors encouraging Lasallians to vote, including Phillies shortstop Jimmy Rollins, actress Debra Messing, Mayor Michael Nutter and actress Morgan Fairchild.

All the election events on culminated on November 4, when La Salle students flooded the voting polls and made their voices heard in a historical election.

The Words of an Inspiring Speaker

Grounded in Conviction

Students, faculty and staff packed the Tom Gola Arena on Monday, March 23 during La Salle Heritage Week to listen to the inspiring words of Sr. Helen Prejean.

Sr. Helen Prejean is the author of the bestselling book, Dead Man Walking, which later became a movie. Her book recounts the harrowing true story of Sr. Prejean's journey and battle into the trials of the death penalty. "I watched a man being killed, and it changed my life," said Sr. Prejean to the La Salle community.

The Louisiana-born nun first became an activist involved in the battle to end the death penalty when she reached out to death row inmate, Patrick Sonnier. Through a series of letters and visits, Sr. Helen began to see the lack of justice in the death penalty system and sought to help Sonnier. Despite her hard work, Sonnier was executed by the State but it encouraged Sr. Prejean to continue working to abolish the death penalty.

During her speech to the La Salle community, Sr. Prejean addressed all present about the horrors and injustices of the death penalty. She cited reasons for abolishing the death penalty, convincing many in the audience to oppose it and support her petition. "Young people have the power to push the death penalty out of this nation," said Sr. Prejean to La Salle students.

International Education Week

Flags dotted the Quad, across from the Union, during the week of November 17-22, symbolizing International Education Week

"The Multicultural and International Center was able to collaborate with various departments, student organizations and offices to create a dynamic event," said International Education Coordinator for International Students, Kate Cook. "We tried to incorporate various cultures found both at La Salle and world-wide."

The Multicultural and International Center worked with Cross Cultural Association, Food Services, Late Night La Salle, the Student Programming Center, Community Development, the La Salle Art Museum and the Career Service Center, among many others, to create events that would educate the La Salle community about international cultures.

"Taste of Culture" was held at Treetops that week, allowing students to sample cuisine from other cultures. Late Night La Salle put together a "Lasallian World Cup", allowing students to engage in a soccer match held in the tradition of the World Cup. There were also presentations throughout the week on International Careers, Japanese art prints and "South of the Border". Hungry students tasted international cuisine all week at events like the International Coffee Hour and American Thanksgiving, wrapping up a great week.

Farewell, Dr. Joseph Cicala

Grounded in 10 years...

On Wednesday, February 18, Dean of Students, Dr. Joseph Cicala, said farewell to the La Salle community, as he prepared to take the position as Vice President for University Life and Student Learning Services at Alvernia University.

Cicala served as Dean of Students at La Salle for ten years, during which he launched numerous successful programs to help the students of this University, leaving behind big shoes to fill. Leading Student Affairs, he oversaw the start of Day ONE for incoming students, expanded the Opening Weekend Activities, commenced the King's Dream Celebration for student leaders, created the famous Affirmation, designed the Shield of Lasallian Leadership Awards and Late Night La Salle, among many other programs.

Perhaps what will most be remembered about Dr. Cicala during the time he spent as Dean of Students, will be his involvement within the La Salle community. A familiar face at many events, Dr. Cicala was always sighted supporting student groups, educational departments and athletic teams. He celebrated student achievements and always stopped to say "hello" when passing students in the halls of the Student Union.

While Dr. Cicala will be sorely missed as a great supporter of La Salle, the student body eagerly welcomes the new Vice President of Student Affairs.

Grounded through Learning

Everyday, students rush to classes that help prepare us for outside the University walls. Whether a science class, or writing class or art class, students at La Salle gain the skills needed to succeed in whatever major they desire.

Each class is aimed at preparing students and teaching skills, yet no two classes are the same. Even classes taught by the same professor are never completely similar from one period to the next.

Through our changing world and worldviews, it can be scary to think about confronting "the real world." Yet the faculty and academic courses of this University work hard to ensure that all students are prepared. Our futures, unceasing in change, are grounded through the learning we maintain through our academics.

School of Arts and Sciences: Continually Growing

The School of Arts and Sciences is comprised of 25 undergraduate programs that students can study and it makes up over 60% of the undergraduate enrollment. From Chemistry to Philosophy, the School of Arts and Sciences has many different fields students can study. The most popular fields of study within the School of Arts and Sciences are: Education, Psychology and Communication.

This year, the science programs within the School of Arts and Sciences were relocated temporarily to West Campus, in the Benilde Tower as Holroyd was renovated throughout the year.

These programs then should move over into the new "green" science center with updated labs in August 2009.

HIGHLIGHTS from the 2009 Year:

* English Professor and Assistant Chair, Dr. Stephen Smith, received the Lindback Teaching Award for Distinguished Teaching.

* The Communication Department added Film Studies as a minor.

* Political Science Professor, Dr. Mary Ellen Balchunis-Harris, taught classes via video conference from the Democratic National Convention.

American Studies

Most majors focus on one primary area of academic research. American Studies is the exception. Covering a vast amount of rich subjects, including American history, art, music and religion - even American food and drink - this interdisciplinary major allows students to gain a full understanding of American culture

According to the Director of American Studies, Dr. Francis Ryan, students have begun to further their comprehension of Americana through the recently included course Transnationalism, which focuses on "looking at America from the outside," answering the question of how America is viewed from other cultures. Furthermore, a program called the Multicultural Roundtable has continued its tradition of bringing students from abroad to Philadelphia.

Graduates often embrace careers in law, journalism and advertising, finding their time spent in the American Studies invaluable.

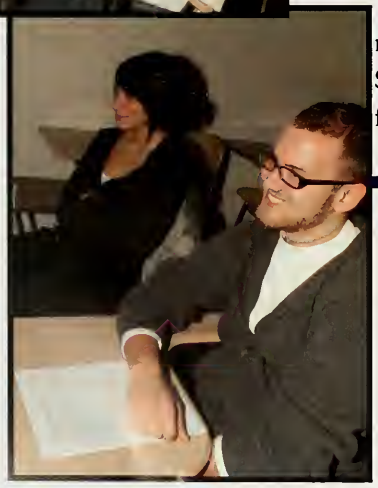
Art History



When I first discovered I'd need a fine arts requirement to obtain my degree, I nearly considered dropping out. I've never been one for learning the complexities of foreign languages and I can't draw to save my life. That's why I determined to take two Art History classes to complete my requirement.

Spanning from the beginnings of art in caves to today's modern methods of using digital art to create new and interesting things, these classes originally seemed simply a method of graduating without having to draw anything or learn German. To my surprise, I fell in love with the classes. I learned to respect art for what it is and was, regardless of whatever era it generated from.

Art History majors experience a great deal more, in courses ranging from American Architecture, the Italian Renaissance, Figure Sculpting, Women and Art and Print Making. Art History majors are also fortunate enough to study within a tremendous area for art: Philadelphia.

Biology

The Biology department prepares students for a wide variety of futures outside of La Salle. Some students apply to medical school while others pursue careers in pharmaceuticals, genetics, zoology, microbiology, neurology among many others. The Biology department prides itself on giving students an extensive overview of biology, allowing students to be prepared for any of these fields.

Students in the Biology major or minor take classes composed of laboratory work to give students experience working with equipment. Led by professors well practiced within the various fields and knowledge of Biology, the labs occupy much of a student's time and education.

Majors in Biology also take a variety of classes in physics, chemistry and mathematics, creating a well rounded student ready to tackle any career outside of La Salle.

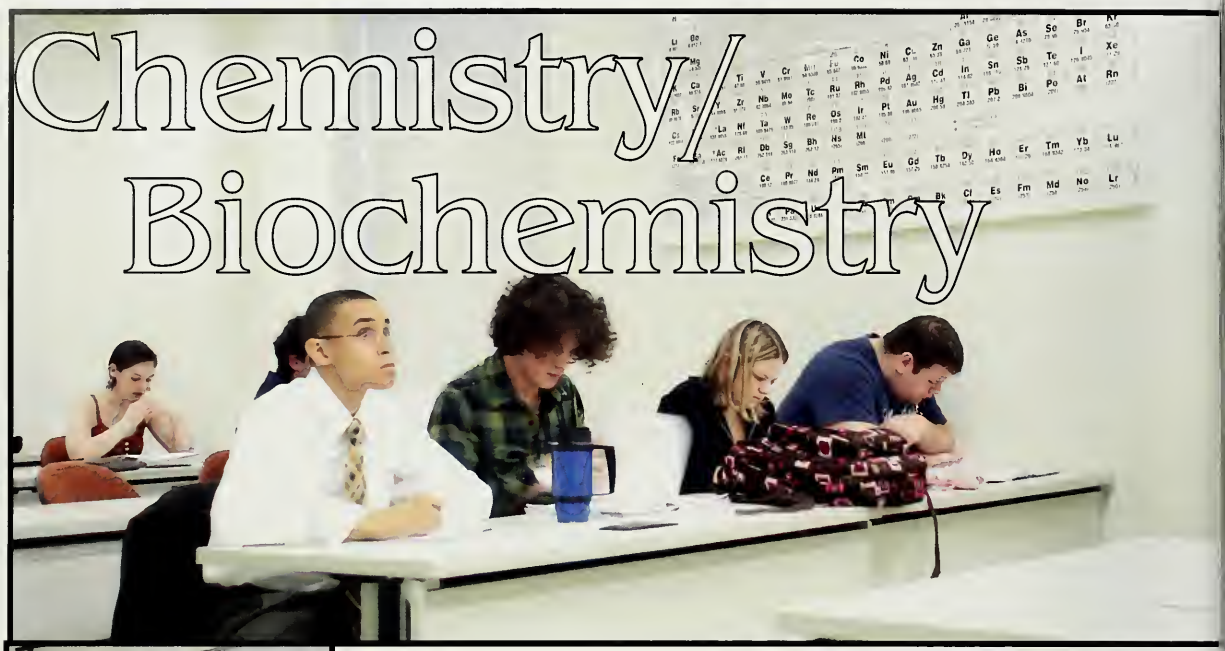
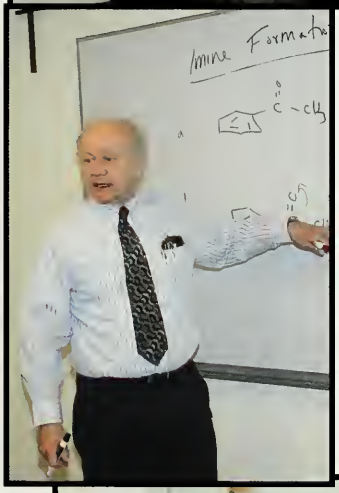
Chemistry/ Biochemistry





Chemistry students are a rarity. But we tend to like it that way. In such an intensive major, you need a core group of people that will truly understand that it is a the big if the settings on an instrument are a tenth off or that it is so fascinating when a crystal is blue instead of red.

Over the years we've been surrounded by a group of professors who are so enthusiastic they could make even the most die-hard English major wish they were taking a lab. However, for the most part, we happily keep them all to ourselves. Because over the years, our little group has turned in to a tiny, close-knit, albeit dysfunctional, family. Call us science nerds if you want - but I bet we had more fun in class than most. Our labs are filled with plenty of strange substances in test tubes, but also with laughter - and we would not have it any other way.

Communication

I knew La Salle's Communication Department was where I wanted to be from the first email exchange with Department Chair, Dr. Lynne Texter. As an overwhelmed high school senior, I had been emailing various communication departments at different colleges, trying to narrow down my long list of possible matches.

La Salle stuck out from the beginning. Dr. Texter always answered my replies quickly and signed her emails "Lynne." Dr. Texter made me feel at home before I even stepped foot on campus. It was from that moment that I knew La Salle was different - in a good way.

The department is not pretentious or stuffy. Instead, professors are friendly, caring and dedicated. That welcoming feeling I experienced three years ago has only grown, and I am reminded everyday that La Salle is where I am meant to succeed.

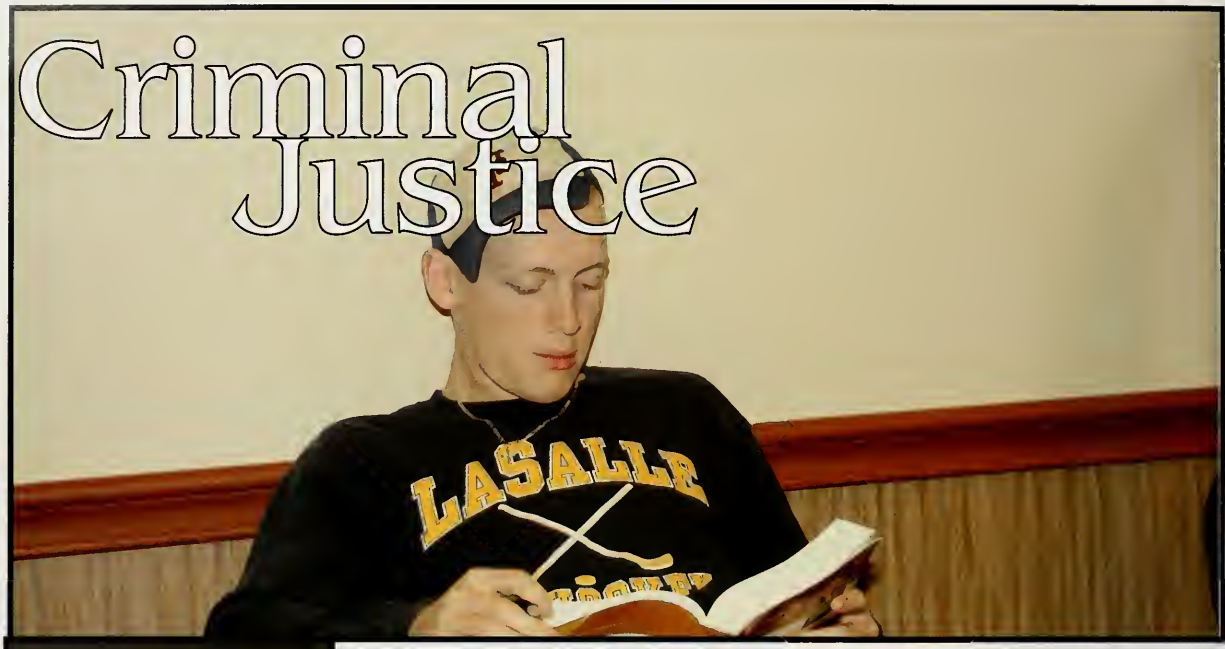
Criminal Justice



The Criminal Justice major prepares students studying it for law school, as well as careers in law enforcement, court tasks, corrections, victim services as well as many other fields. Classes achieve this by teaching students about the causes of delinquent and criminal behaviors as well as the problems of the juvenile and criminal justice systems.

To complete a Criminal Justice major, students take 10 courses within the Criminal Justice program. These courses include: Social Problems and Social Justice, Criminal Law, Policing: Theory and Dynamics, Institutional and Community Corrections, Violence in Society, Crimes of the Powerful, among many other courses.

Not only do students take courses in Criminal Justice, but they are also required to take courses in sociology, political science and psychology to help them understand the complexities of Criminal Justice.

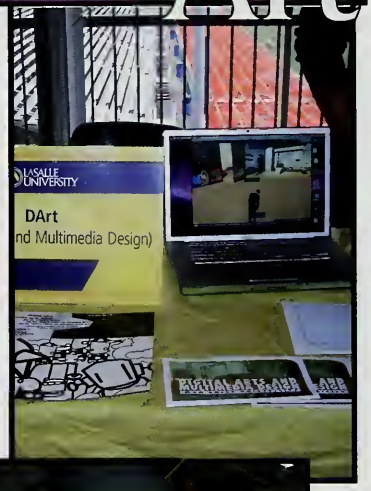
Digital Art



La Salle University's ever-expanding Digital Arts and Multimedia Design (D'Art) major provides students a hands-on, creative learning experience. Headed by director Dr. Conrad Gleber, D'Art gives Lasallians a chance to explore different forms of digital communication and design. Students use a number of programs, interfaces and design principles to create a host of digital media. Plus, the three unique tracks within the D'Art major offer students opportunities to fine tune their skills and choose the right career path.

Students in the D'Art program experience in-class instruction in an up-to-date lab. Most D'Art students also complete an internship, as well as work on projects involving local organizations and real-life clients. The D'Art program gives these tight-knit students the freedom to explore their creativity while preparing them for life after La Salle.

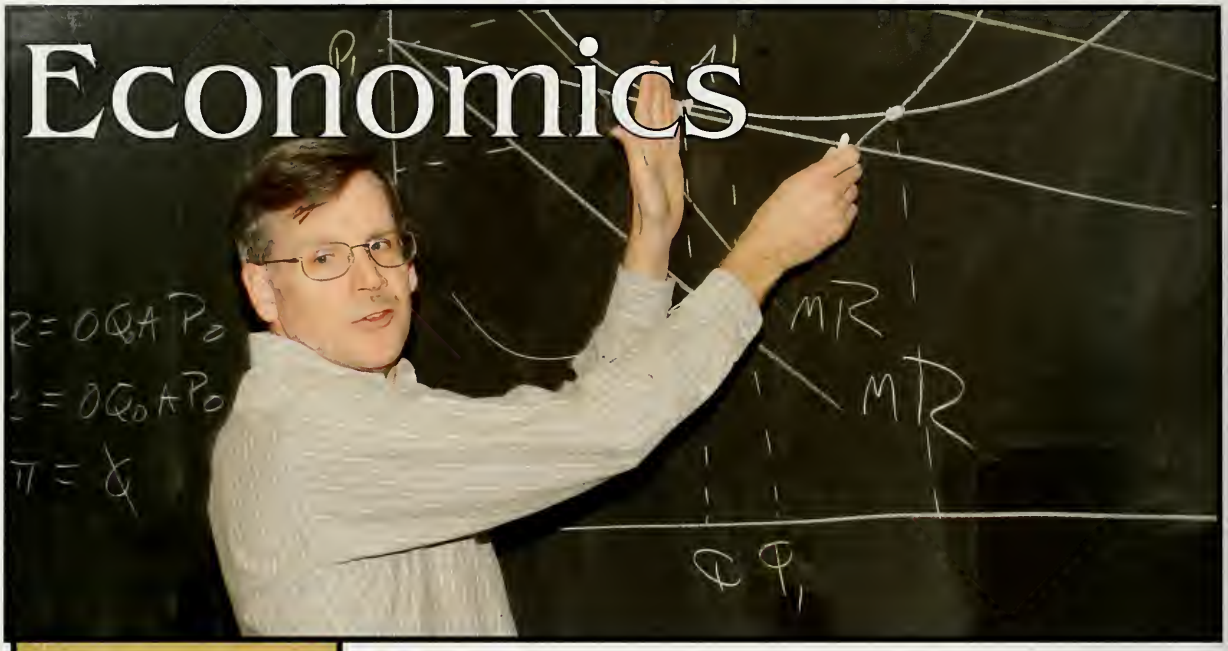
Economics



With the current economic issues, students studying Economics are able to learn and understand the causes and effects of what is occurring in this country, as well as internationally. Studying applications like supply and demand, inflation, market equilibrium, students are able to make sense of financial issues both on a personal level and social.

Studying Economics prepares students for a number of jobs after graduation, including jobs within the business, law, research, finances and teaching fields.

While classes within the Economics department focus much on making good economic and financial decisions, professors also strive to teach students how to think and make good decisions in all aspects of life. The hope is that by teaching students to always think about the effects of decisions then they will attribute that same knowledge to the financial world.

Education

Being an education major at La Salle University is a rewarding experience. Education majors can receive certification in either Elementary and Special Education, or in Secondary Education. In addition, each student chooses to take additional courses in a specialty area. Students can choose from American Studies - the most popular - Math, Social Studies, English, Science or even Communication.

There are plenty of options for those looking for a career in Education. The Education program has amazing professors who support each student whether with help in coursework or with writing lesson plans. The faculty and staff of La Salle's education department are always there with a smile on their faces and a helping hand.

English

People need writers. They need graduates who have the analytical and communication skills necessary for the modern job market. An English degree may not train a student to specialize in a specific field, but it will certainly prepare its graduates to utilize their talents sharpened within English classes. In the end, this could prove entirely more rewarding.

Three separate tracks are available to the English major, depending on their field of interest. The first track, Liberal Arts, provides students with the diagnostic and writing skills necessary to succeed in graduate or law school..

There is the Writing track, which trains students in the fine art of creative writing, the technical field of business writing, and the complex ability to edit or publish. The final track, English-Education, combines English with those seeking to double major in Secondary Education.

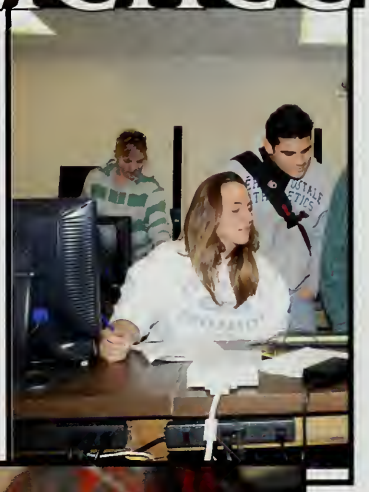
Environmental Science



Studying Environmental Science prepares students within that major for careers in the environmental industry or for a graduate school path. The Environmental Science major allows students to focus on three different areas: Environmental Chemistry, Environmental Biology and Environmental Geology.

Classes making up the major are from the Geology, Math, Chemistry and Biology disciplines. Combined, these classes make up nine of the required classes needed to graduate with a major in Environmental Science. However, to complete the major, students also need to complete a concentration in either Chemistry, Geology or Biology.

Students leaving La Salle with a degree in this major have been quite successful. Many have held jobs within the United States government, while other students have been highly successful working within various aspects of the oil industry.

Foreign Languages and Literatures

One University, many tongues. In a world where globalization is a fact, a second language is a great asset. Luckily, La Salle offers majors and minors in the Classic languages: Italian, French, Spanish, Russian, and German. Besides these, La Salle also offers minor in Japanese.

Learning another language will surely place one ahead of the game. In today's global economy many employers would rather hire an employee who knows languages other than English. Learning a second or third language gives students a wider range of opportunities. And for this reason, many students in different disciplines have a minor in a language or even dual major with a foreign language. The possibilities of learning a foreign languge are endless.

Geology

The geology department, although small, is full of quality. Many of these graduates go on to successful positions in state and federal agencies and in private industry.

Geology as a major reaches across various sciences, from chemistry, physics and biology - it isn't all just rocks! In addition to quality faculty, students use sophisticated machinery and instruments, such as a scanning electron microscope, an x-ray diffraction machine, lapidary saws, ground-penetrating radar, and polarizing microscopes.

Another attractive feature in studying geology is the field work. Students regularly take field trips to unique localities to observe and study firsthand environmental and geological features.

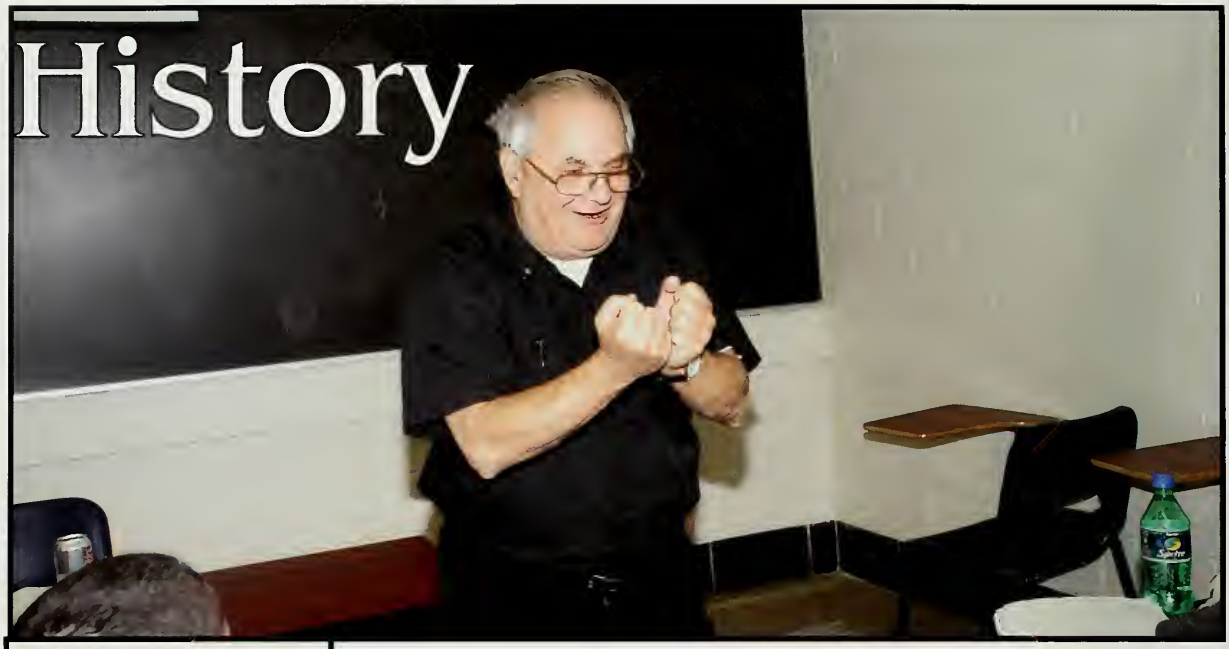
History



Dedicated and enthusiastic about the past, the History department works tirelessly to bring the past into the present. From publishing an award-winning journal twice a year, the Histories, to sponsoring numerous historical field trips for students, like November's successful trip to Fort Mifflin, the History Department strives to remind the University not to forget the past.

In addition, the History department has also undertaken a new venture this year, sponsoring a competition for "The Leo Award, which awards students writing remarkable essays related to Philadelphia's history. Talk about keeping history alive!

The La Salle History department honors our past, so we can look forward to our future.

ISBT

Technological advances today have changed the way we as a society approach and solve problems. This calls for a different type of scientist. La Salle University is home to an exciting and innovative program in which science, business, and technology are interwoven.

The objective of the Integrated Science, Business, and Technology Program (ISBT) is to produce a science generalist, one who is technologically competent, with a strong ethical foundation and with the business knowledge necessary to solve real-world problems. Tomorrow's leaders will be those who understand how science, technology, and business all interact.

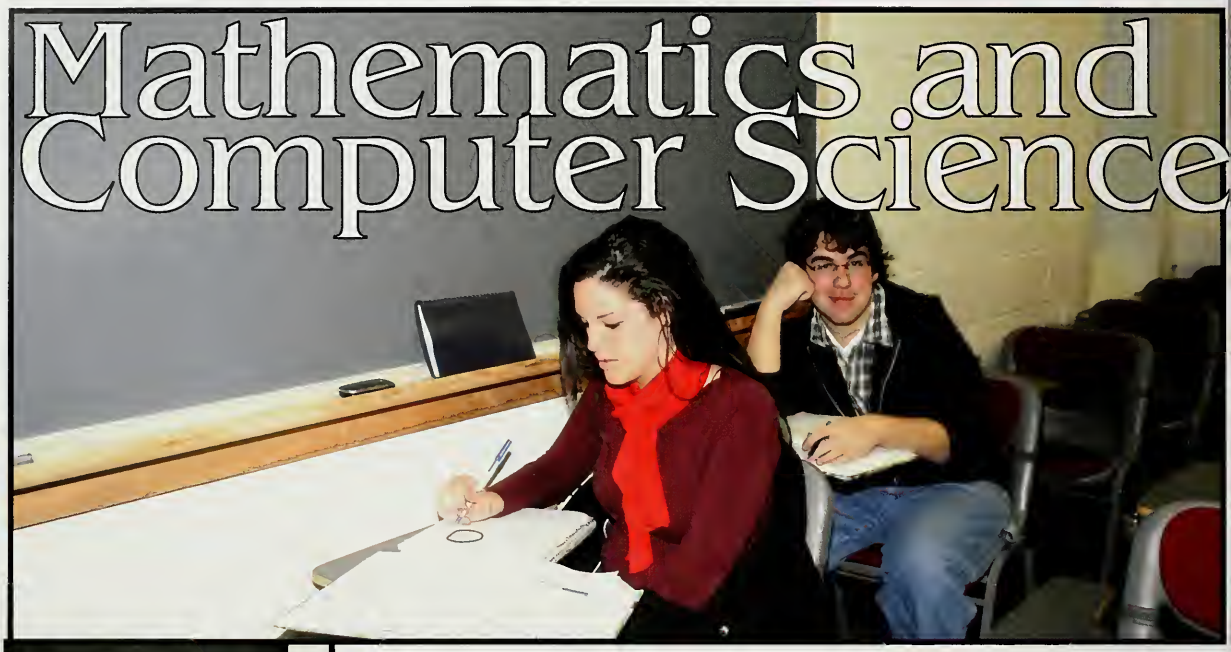
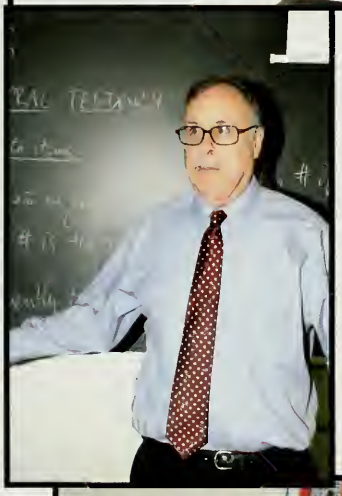
Mathematics and Computer Science





The department of Mathematics and Computer Science offers students plenty of career choices once graduating, from teaching math, banking, IT and computer programming.

Mathematics deals with numbers and problem solving, looking deeply at the various forms of math: trigonometry, calculus, algebra, geometry, among others. Majoring in Mathematics teaches students how to deal with numbers but also how solve problems and think things through on many levels.

Computer Science looks at all aspects of computers, whether technical or programs. Students learn how to properly utilize computer programs to use in many forms of business. They also learn what makes up a computer, outside of the programs.

Either field of study will get students where they want to be and help students think "outside the box."

Philosophy

"The Nobility"
A poem about Philosophy

Students: looking within selves to find inner peace,
Something we all need
Professors: modern-day heroes fighting for good Molding minds while outwitting skeptics
Together: giving meaning to the minutes
Opening worlds through ideas.

Is thinking a dead art?
The works are old,
The misunderstood masters
long dead,
But philosophy thrives with this generation
Of chosen thinkers and doers.

The price of wisdom over their heads
Tackling the topics no one else will
When being ignored is prosecution.

Critical, reasonable logic possessed by few
The philosopher walks with his head high
And his mind occupied .

His steps resonate with these credos
Be just in an unjust society
Be an individual in thought
Be in the light, do not accept the shadows.

Society against him—blame
time
With these lessons he crawls out of the darkness
And brings the rest with him.

Political Science

Last year the Political Science Department restored its formerly annual Alumni Reception and revitalized it by inviting graduating Political Science seniors to attend. Political Science alumni who came to reconnect with old friends also got the opportunity to meet with current students, share their experiences of the dreaded "real world" and give advice to the next generation of La Salle Political Science alumni.

The event was such a success that the department decided to do it again, so on April 3rd graduating seniors networked with more than 80 Political Science alumni from a wide variety of professions over sandwiches, wine, and beer. "For seniors who attend, this is a great opportunity to network with alums from your department about jobs, careers, and future plans," said Dr. Michael Dillon, Chair of the Political Science Department.

Psychology

What is a Psychology student? What does it take to be a Psychology major? The Psychology student must be able to multi-task, think of the bigger picture and be open to new opportunities. A psychology student is interested in international issues and is aware of the basic needs of people. A psychology major requires an inquisitive personality and a drive to better the lives of those around you. A student studying psychology plays to people's curious nature. They want to learn about the physical brain, its functions and how the brain plays a role in a being's personality. A psychology major is interested in the scientific study of human and animal behavior relating to the human mind and mental states.

The students studying psychology at La Salle University are an eclectic mix of all of these traits, influencing persons or groups to better society.

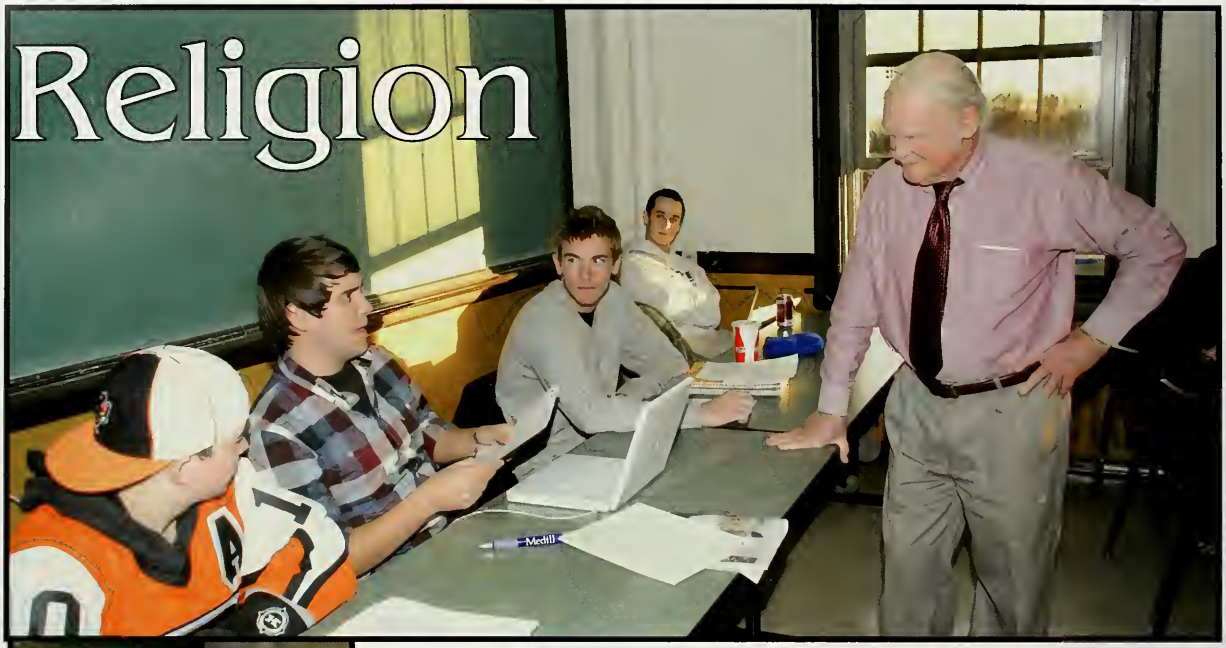
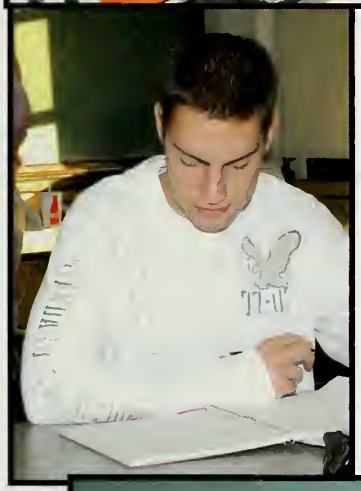
Religion





With all the different types of religion in the world, it can be a difficult major for students to study. There is so much history, tradition and creed involved in religions from all over the world.

Religion majors at La Salle study more than simply the traditions of the Catholic faith. There are classes that study all other Christian faiths, as well as courses devoted to Middle Eastern faiths. However, many classes also look at issues that are not just black and white, like ethics and moral issues. These classes include: Catholicism in the Modern Worl; Buddhism, Hinduism, and Religions of the Far East; Judaism and Islam; Contemporary Moral Problems; and Biomedical Ethics.

La Salle offers students more then just a basic understanding about religions. By taking some of these classes, students also learn about the differences in faith and tolerance for others.

Social Work

The Social Work program at La Salle has worked hard over the years to instill excellence in the students within the program. The faculty of this esteemed program often have hands-on skills within the field that enable them to guide students and offer real-life experiences.

One teacher in particular from the Social Work program, Dr. Bonni Zetick, works hard with the rest of her peers to encourage students and help students in all ways possible. For her contributions to the La Salle community, Dr. Zetick was awarded the Faculty Distinguished Service Award on August 21, 2008 at Opening Convocation.

Besides being e beloved member of the Social Work faculty, Dr. Zetick has also worked outside the University to advocate for social change, equality for retarded and menatal illness citizensm, and substance abuse programs. She is deeply involved in commmunity service, both at La Salle and the city of Philadelphia.

Sociology

This year, the Department of Sociology, Social Work and Criminal Justice welcomed a new chair to the halls of Olney. Hiring, Dr. Charles A. Gallagher, the department has set itself on the path to success. Dr. Gallagher's level of scholarship is only matched by his skills as a professor, teacher and mentor. Dr. Gallagher taught at Georgia State University before finding his way to La Salle. He is not new to La Salle, however. Dr. Gallagher taught courses at La Salle while he was a graduate student at Temple.

When I first met Dr. Gallagher, I was immediately struck by his broad knowledge and dedication to teaching. One of his assignments for his Sociology 150 course is a "Media Black Out" Week where students are asked to refrain from using any kinds of media, except for homework purposes, to show students see how much time they waste.

Dr. Gallagher's presence in the department has brought with it a resurrection of the Sociology Club and a dedication to scholarship in the field of Sociology.

School of Business Business Scholars Co-Op Program

The School of Business offers a unique program, the Business Scholars Co-Op Program, that allows students to work within their chosen career field for 10 to 12 months These students are hardworking, often balancing their co-op experiences with full time class schedules.

When Business Scholars Co-Op graduates from the class of 2008 graduated, 100% of these students already had jobs, according to Penny Grobb, Director of the Business Scholars Co-op Program.

This year, fighting tough economic conditions, the class of 2009 Business Scholars Co-Op still came out on top, with 98% of these students having jobs. The successes are limitless, all thanks to the Business Scholars Co-Op Program, and will continue for future students.

HIGHLIGHTS from the 2009 Year:

* Brian Concannon, '10, as part of the Business Scholar Co-Op Program, worked with both, the Philadelphia Zoo and The Vanguard Group.

* Danielle Signorelli, '09, as part of the Business Scholars Co-Op Program, worked with both the Philadelphia Eagles and PricewaterhouseCoopers.

Accounting

It is important for all Accounting majors to understand exactly how businesses work so that they can help companies make important financial decisions.

The Accounting program has five areas of study that students can focus on to become successful in the business world: cost management, information systems, auditing, taxation and multinational relation. Many faculty member have experience in both the business world, as well as the financial market that can help students move forward in the Accounting program.

After focusing on these areas of study, students leave La Salle to become: business executives, bankers, financial planners, consultants and tax planners. The program has also helped students start careers in non profit corporations, government and medical.

Finance

Finance students have many reasons for choosing their field of study: there are a plethora of jobs available within the broad "Finance" world and finding a job after college should be easy.

The faculty of the Finance department lead students through the complicated numbers and rules that allow them to grasp a firm knowledge of financial situations and be successful after college. These dedicated members of the University community offer guidance and consultations to their students to help them succeed in a competitive financial field.

Faculty members also maintain connections to many businesses and companies across the nations. These relationships allow students to obtain experience before graduation, with internships, as well as jobs after graduation.

Management

Students within the Management major study how people and groups of people behave and interact in an organizational and business setting. Often, students combine this major with another major to put these studies to use and succeed within a business field.

Management courses focus on teaching students the knowledge and skills needed to motivate people, manage projects and companies, solve problems and make decisions to operate a business properly. Many of the Management courses also allow students to get hands on practice with their leadership skills to help prepare them to manage any type of business.

Management Information Systems

Management Information Systems classes look at computers and programs to help people run a business and better utilize their time, resources and energies to work better. This enables people, businesses and computer programs to be more productive.

Students studying Management Information Systems (MIS) are prepared for a number of jobs after graduation. According to the MIS website, an individual in this field of study can work as a "systems analyst, database administrator, business analyst, data analyst, e-Commerce applications analyst, computer systems auditor, information systems manager, computer and software marketing manager, computer consultant, network administrator, and off-shore contract managers."

As computers and technology marches forward and changes so will this field continue to change. Because of this students will always have job opportunities.

Marketing

When people think of marketing, they usually think of advertising. But marketing is more than creating Superbowl commercials. What's really interesting about the marketing major at La Salle is the study of the consumer. Everything we do - selling, product or service design, advertising, promotion, placement and pricing analysis - is a function of what the consumer wants or needs. It's amazing to learn how much professional marketers know about us, the purchaser.

Marketing majors conduct real-world marketing research projects to understand how big brands go from goal setting to execution. We study how everything from the amount we pay, to the places we buy have already been predicted by companies months before our purchases. We also gain first-hand experience in our careers.

With a core business knowledge behind us and an experiential education to draw from, La Salle's marketing majors will continue to have a high success rate in the real world, and a lot of fun doing it.

School of Nursing and Health Sciences: Relocation and Clinical

The School of Nursing and Health Sciences has continued to grow over the past year, making its new home in the St. Benilde Tower, formerly Germantown Hospital. As the School of Nursing and Health Sciences students become more comfortable in their new home, they get the chance to work within a medical environment, offering hands-on experiences.

Important to students studying within the School of Nursing and Health Sciences is the clinical work they do. Students from each program within the School of Nursing and Health Sciences are required to do some type of clinical work to graduate to achieve in-the-field practice.

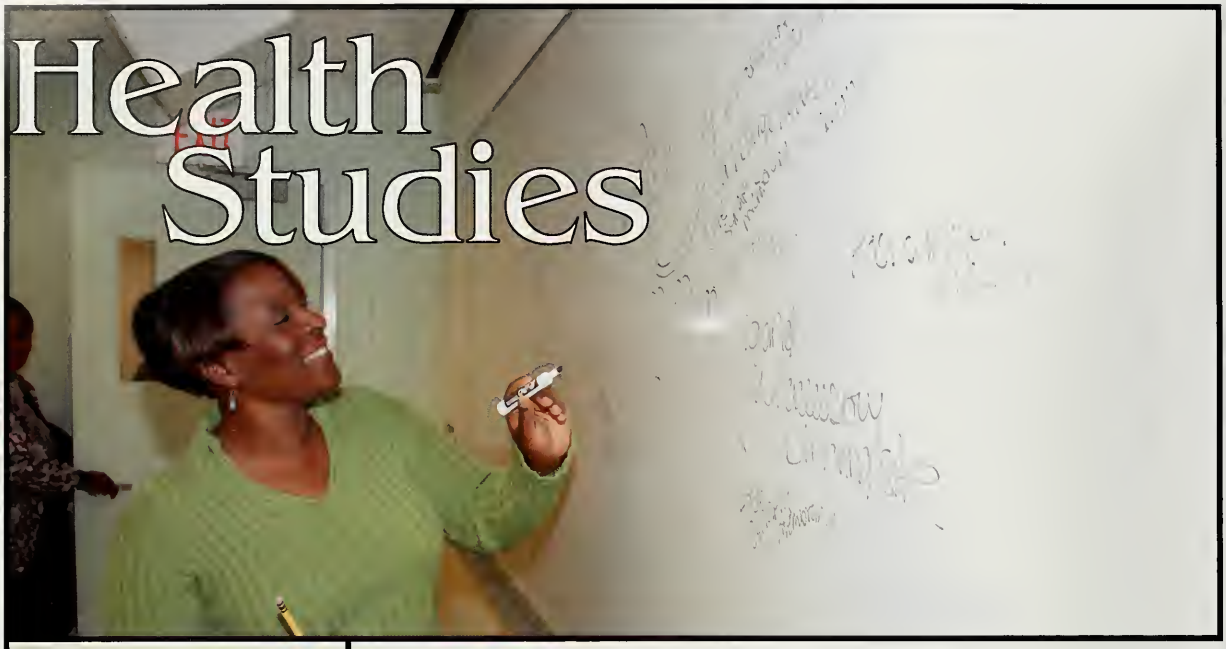
Recently added to the School is the program of Health Studies, in which students can now receive a degree.

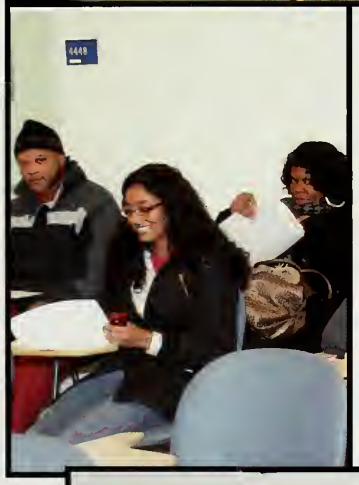
HIGHLIGHTS from 2009 Year:

* The first student-run Nursing forum was held in March, where graduating Nursing students could meet with representatives from local hospitals and medical facilities.

* Speech-Language Hearing Science major, Joan Lyall, '10, was accepted as an intern at the Rusk Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine.

Health Studies





The School of Nursing recently added Health Studies as a major students can study. To achieve a degree in Health Studies, students take a wide varieity of classes to prepare them for fields within areas of health and community.

Classes that Health Studies majors take include: Plagues and Epidemics, Health Communication, Stress and Health, Women's Health Concerns and Urban Health: Families and Children in Jeopardy. Besides these Health Studies classes and many others, students also take a variety of Nursing, Nutrition and Speech-Language-Hearing Science classes, creating well-rounded students to achieve success in any health field.

Jen McShane, 10

Nursing

Subjectively speaking, I personally could not imagine myself doing anything else but Nursing. For most Nursing students, they expect something different than what they get. When you become a Nursing major as a freshman, you do not know what you will encounter. You are not really ready for the fact that Nursing school is also a journey inside yourself, a chance to learn about your own strengths, weaknesses, fears, likes, and dislikes. You learn the stuff that makes you tick and you learn just how patient you can really be if put your mind to it.

One of the hardest parts for me is the emotional aspect. It is absolute torture to see a patient in such incredible physical or emotional pain and know that there is only so much you can do to help them. However, sometimes you say just the right thing to a difficult patient and they start responding positively.

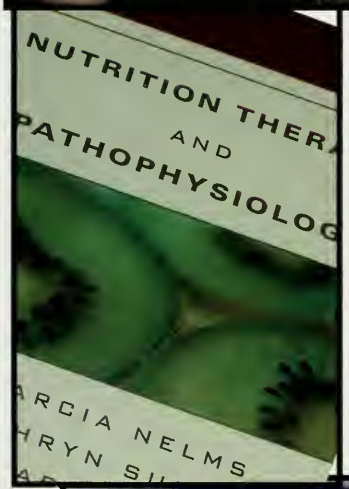
Nutrition



Nutrition majors study the make up of food and how it reacts with the human body. This involves Nutrition majors to need a combination of knowledge about the human body, as well as the chemical and nutritional make ups of different types of foods. Because of this, students studying Nutrition also take a variety of chemistry, anatomy and biology classes.

While Nutrition classes look at the effects of foods on the human body, they also look at food management, preparing students for a job in food management for businesses and health care. The work in these classes includes projects like designing nutritional food plans for people with illnesses, children and families on budgets.

Nutrition majors graduate with the skills needed to succeed in many fields, including public health, government, education, food research, pharmaceuticals, food companies, restaurants and hospitals.

Speech-Language-Hearing

The Speech-Language-Hearing classes teach students within this major how to deal and assist people suffering with various types of communication problems. These communication problems are often either hearing or language cognition issues.

Not only do students learn the knowledge that is needed to assist people living with these problems but they also get clinical experience, giving them hands-on experience within the field. Professors are always available to lead and guide students, having working experience.

At La Salle the Speech-Language-Hearing program is accredited by the Council on Academic Accreditation in Audiology and Speech-Language-Hearing Pathology of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

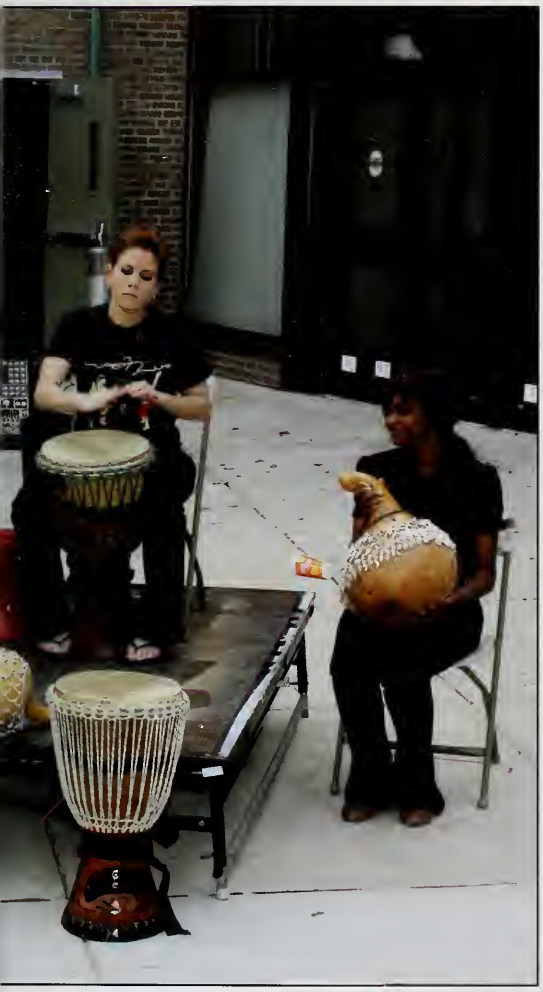
Grounded through Involvement

A student's day at La Salle flies in a whirlwind of classes, activities and events. All of these together create "student life" at La Salle.

Involvement by the students is what creates "Student Life". Students sponsor trips, events during free time and LateNight La Salle events on the weekends. These students are the commitment behind "Student Life" for all students.

These pages within the yearbook represent Student Life as well as the hardwork and dedication of the students that create it. Student Life is truly grounded in involvement by the students their fellow students.

WORLD CULTURES FAIR



A Sharing of Cultures

The windy weather on October 2nd, 2008 provided the optimum condition for the aroma of empanadas, sweet potatoes, and beef jerky to float around campus. Echoes of drums bounced around the quad, alerting students to an event going on. 200 students followed their senses and came upon the 7th Annual World Cultures Fair. Hosted by the Cross Cultural Association and sponsored by the Student Programming Center, Multicultural & International Center, and La Salle multicultural organizations (A-ASIA, AASL, CEES, Italian Club, LHSA, OLAS, and Phi Beta Sigma). The event celebrated the diverse cultures on campus.

Many of the multicultural organizations brought tasty dishes to the event. From the steaming dim sum brought by A-ASIA, to the chocolates and snacks brought by CEES and the Italian Club, it would be safe to say that the student body thoroughly enjoyed the tastes from around the world. There were times when Justin Bettis, the president of the African American Student League, could have lost a finger while handing out sweet potato pie from his table. Aside from the food, dozens of students found their way to the South Asian Student Association's table and got intricate designs made out of lentil on their hands. This form of art is called henna, which is usually adorned on special occasions. The International Chess Club brought their many versions of chess from around the world and students sat down and learned the many ways to defeat their opponents. The slick choreography of the STEP Team and rhythmic beats of the Neo African Drums N' Dance were the final pieces to the fair.

Homecoming Traditions: New and Old

Rainy weather didn't dampen this year's Homecoming celebration. Many Lasallians helped make this year's weekend a huge success.

It all kicked off with a campus-wide BBQ on Friday evening. Hot dogs, burgers, and chicken were grilled by student leaders in RSA, SGA, IFSC, and Late Night La Salle student workers. A large amount of students, faculty, and staff stopped by throughout the evening to enjoy a free meal.

Saturday brought athletic events all around campus. The morning started early with a children's clinic hosted by the Women's Soccer team. The Men's and Women's Basketball teams held open practices for alumni, friends, and family. The Women's Rugby team hosted Bryn Mawr in a league match and came out on top with a score of 15-5. The Men's Lacrosse team then took the field and continued the winning spree against Delaware Valley College, 20-2. IFSC also hosted a charitable athletic event of their own: powder puff football.

Tradition continued inside the Alumni Tent and at RSA's Carnifall. The Alumni Tent attracted alumni of all ages and classes, while Carnifall provided a great way to get away from the cold, rainy weather. Not only were there food, prizes, and a magician, but the Homecoming King and Queen were announced at Carnifall. Sean Hand and Stacey Engster took home the crown of King and Queen, with Doug Phelan, Chris McNabb, Margaret Purack, and Anna Thomasson as their court.

It may have rained all weekend, but this year's Homecoming Weekend continued to shine!

HOMECOMING

HAUNTED HOUSE

A Late Night Haunt

Many members of the La Salle University community have often wondered whether the campus was haunted. On Friday, October 31, proof of something supernatural manifested itself in the Union Building. Earsplitting screams, crimson blood, and severed appendages filled the air as people were chased from a horrific scene in the Dan Rodden Theater. Zombies, mad scientists, and evil clowns were found lying claim to the theater and green room, treating all who entered as prey. The source of the frightening commotion could be traced to the Third Annual Haunted House. Led by members from The Masque, Resident Student Association, WEXP Radio, and Late Night La Salle, Halloween 2008 at La Salle University was definitely more trick than treat.

Members from each of the organizations helped in the planning, advertising, and presentation of the Haunted House. In addition, these students created the sets and props for the event. Actors also sat for as many as 2 to 3 hours getting makeup done to look the part of a frightening creature. Students were transformed into werewolves, clowns, dead zombies and other creatures torn straight from their nightmares. The actors then took their positions as students were led, drug, or chased through the house.

This year's Haunted House maintained the success of previous houses providing 125 La Salle students with a Halloween thrill. The event drew crowds of students dressed in their Halloween costumes. Whether dressed as Snow White and her Seven Dwarves, Smurfs, or Where's Waldo, not a student was spared from scare.

A Home for All

Beneath College Hall lies one of the most homey places on campus—the Campus Ministry Office and De La Salle Chapel. It is this welcoming environment that Noel Koenke calls home. Koenke graduated from Loyola College in Maryland, was a Campus Ministry intern for four years, a high school teacher and a flight attendant. Since filling the two year vacancy as Campus Minister, she has headed up Evensong, a weekly prayer night featuring a student reflection; she directs the choir/ liturgical and is building the retreat program by instituting a ski retreat and Kairos 2 College. Koenke's mission is simple, "I want to implement programs for all students, especially those that have not yet been reached, which I believe is one of the goals of a Lasallian school. I also want to help make spirituality personal, exciting, and an everyday opportunity for students. College is one of the best opportunities the Church has, to make a good and lasting impression on the faith lives of young adults." So far, so good. Says Koenke, "I love my job and I have a lot of hopes. Being here, thus far, I'm glad to have begun these programs but I could not have done it without Father Jim [Dever] or Brother Bob [Kinzler]. They have been very welcoming and supportive." Senior Chris McNabb enjoys her presence and what she brings to the table. "I think Noel's experience has equipped her with a great number of resources. In addition, she provides energy and passion; she has a great deal of knowledge and brings unique programming to the table. She has been great to have on staff." Campus ministry regularly offers Sunday Mass and Daily Mass. With so many options and a stellar staff, it can be home for anyone.

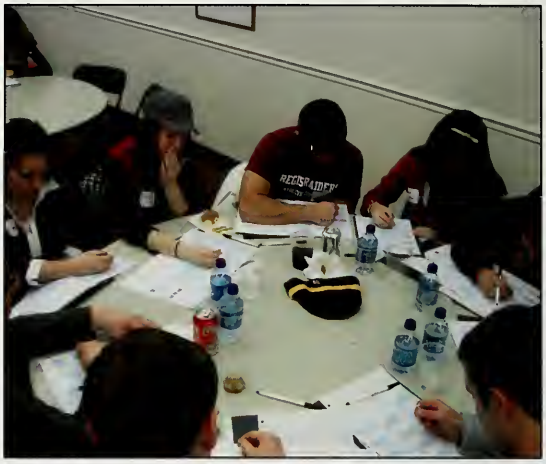
King's Dream 2009



"From Dream to Reality"

On January 19, 2009, La Salle University celebrated the legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. by hosting King's Dream 2009: From Dream to Reality. The day began with sixteen students participating in a park clean-up at Fernhill. This was the first service component added to King's Dream in six years.

In addition, King's Dream included an afternoon session called "The Emerging Leaders Retreat". During this, 50 students participated in a discussion on types of leadership and leadership in the La Salle community and neighborhood. These same students took a leadership personality test.

"The most informative part of the day for me was learning about my personality type," said freshman Nursing major, Megan Marron. "I think that knowing yourself and how you work as a leader allows you to effectively and efficiently lead. My favorite part of the day was our concluding discussion connecting our role as Lasallians to the goals of Dr. King. It is so important to remember that although we are college students, we share our neighborhood with many other people and we need to be aware of our fellow community members."

The day concluded with a dinner at Treetops featuring music from Neo African Drums n' Dance.

Overall, the day saw students carrying on the message of Dr. King, discussing ways to incorporate it into their Lasallian values. At the end of King's Dream, these students were ready to carry on Dr. King's challenges of leadership and service.

Multicultural Traditions

The sights, sounds and traditions of different cultures graced the Dan Rodden Theatre the night of March 20th for the Second Annual Multicultural Show.

Members of the South Asian Student Alliance (S.A.S.A.) and American Asian Students Intercultural Association (A/A.S.I.A.) worked hard create a entertaining and educational program.

The night kicked off at 6:30 with a cultural skit performed by members of S.A.S.A. Then La Salle Singers remembered the American cultural with a beautiful performance of the National Anthem. This was followed by a "Freedom Steppers Dance", performed by children from Philadelphia Freedom Schools and a Filipino Dance performed by Mutya Philippene Dance Company. Music from African Drummers was performed by the Youth Art Forum of Cultural Expression (Y.A.F.C.E.).

A highlight from the night was a collaborative "Unity Dance" performed by a combination of members of S.A.S.A., Y.A.F.C.E. and the Pastorius Francis Elementary School. The night culminated in a Multicultural fashion show, with La Salle Multicultural students walking the runways.

The night was a success, raising over $300, which was donated to the students from Philadelphia Freedom Schools, Say Yes to Education, and the Youth Art Forum of Cultural Expression, all who joined in the performances that night.

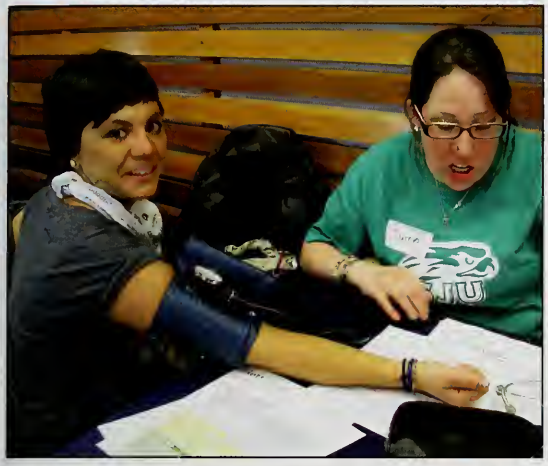
Health Fair



Health Fair

Every spring the Health Advisory Committee coordinates the annual Health Fair supported by the Student Activities Fee. Work begins several months before the actual event.

The 2009 Health Fair was titled: "Yes We Can...Be Healthy in 2009". The fair included over 60 booths, which were organized and staffed by 11 University departments, 11 student organizations, 34 outside health related organizations and 8 healthy food vendors. Approximately 400 participants enjoyed massages, glucose and cholesterol testing, blood pressure checks, podiatry evaluations, eye exams, beer goggle bowling, computerized health assessments and aromatherapy. There were also demonstrations by the cheerleaders, dance team, Neo African Drums n' Dance, the La Salle Singers and the La Salle University Jazz Ensemble.

In addition to these activities, there was a variety of health-related information which included topics on: the hook up culture, oral care, tobacco issues, herbal remedies, nutrition, health insurance, psychiatric disabilities, childhood cancers, bone marrow donations, sexual health issues, exercise and BMI, health/wellness books, eating disorders and brain injury prevention.

Based on the smiling faces - and positive evaluations received about the Health Fair - this year's Health Fair was a success.

Mentoring Freshmen

The New Explorers Mentor Program, or NEMP began few years ago by Sean Hand, '09, and Chris Vokolos, '08, both members of SGA. With the help of Phenix Frazier and Teri Ceraso from Learning Support Services, these students spent many Friday nights researching similar programs at different college campuses and eventually got NEMP off the ground. It was designed to help incoming freshman assimilate to La Salle and college life.

When a student first arrives at La Salle, Opening Weekend, FYO, freshman advising and many La Salle faculty and staff are available to give them the warmest welcome possible. But what about the first week of class when a student cannot find Benilde Tower or the Gold Card office? What happens on the weekend when a freshman's few close friends go home?

NEMP aims to pair a small group of incoming freshmen, Little E, with an upperclassman, Big E. The Big Es know where freshmen need to go. They are able to bring Little Es to a Late Night La Salle event or a Phillies game with some friends. Big Es act as big brothers and sisters on campus, introducing them to student leaders, and making them feel like a true member of the La Salle community. Said Junior Joan Lyall, "the most rewarding thing is just being able to help freshman adjust to the many changes that they'll face their first year."

When the program started, it had 6 Big Es and 50 Little Es. This year there were 30+ mentors working with close to 300 freshmen. The success this program has seen in just a few short years is a testament to the potential this program has in shaping the future of not only the freshman students, but also the Lasalle community.

A Collaboration of Student Work

Spring Fling is a collaborative weekend of events designed to bring the campus together and celebrate the coming of spring. Plans for Spring Fling 2009 (April 17, 18 and 19) were in swing all year to make 2009 as successful as 2008.

The Spring Fling Committee was made up of members from RSA, BackPAC, WEXP, CAOS, PRSSA, and Late Night La Salle. "This small group of students who planned this event spent an entire year organizing, fundraising, and promoting Spring Fling Weekend", said Julie Pompizzi, Late Night La Salle Coordinator. The Committee was supported by SGA, IFSC, Multimedia Services, and the Student Activities Fee.

Throughout the weekend, about 1000 people attended the events at the Hayman Center, with the largest amount attending the CollegeHumor Comedy show, about 500. However, this does not include some of the other events that were planned in conjunction with Spring Fling such as the Masque show, the South Campus Shindig, and Dodgeball for Diabetes. "The weekend was, overall, jam-packed with entertainment", said Pompizzi.

The weekend turned out to be a lot of fun for all involved. The students that worked on the Committee deserve much of the credit for the success of the weekend. "Spring Fling Weekend is exciting because it is a collaboration of many different parts of the La Salle community and it brings together many different types and groups of students. It's a celebration of making it through the school year," said Pompizzi.

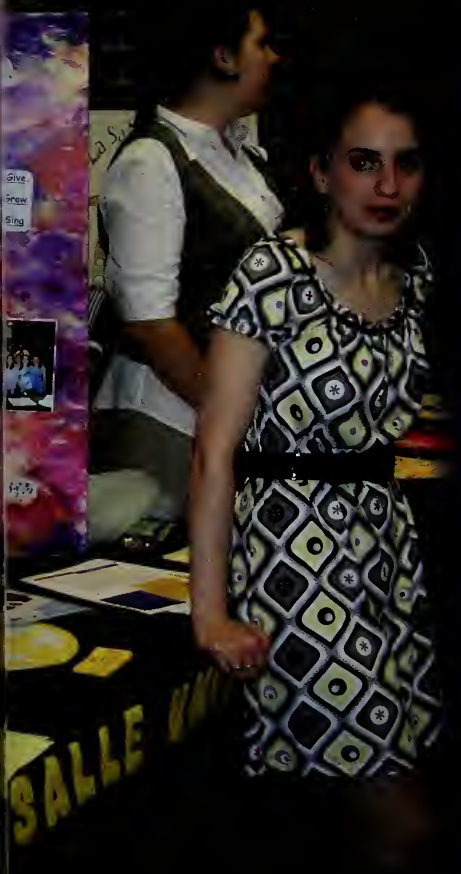
Grounded through Commitment



It takes deep and thorough commitment for a student to incorporate clubs and activities into the grueling schedule of courses and classwork. Yet La Salle students seem to make it work, often going above and beyond to be involved.

With over 100 clubs active on campus, it is obvious that La Salle students are grounded in their commitment to their organizations. Whether it be a club sport, a Greek organization, academic society, performing arts or student media, students all over the campus show their commitment by their work withing these organizations.

These pages show the commitment that La Salle student organizations put forth for the La Salle community.

A.A.S.L.

The African American Student League, or A.A.S.L., worked hard throughout the year to increase awareness of cultural differences and prevailing African American issues. They also provide the campus with various types of programming and activities. This year, A.A.S.L. was highly visible on campus as they participated in the World Cultures Fair, the Health Fair and sponsored a trip to the Bates Motel, among many other activities.

AIDS Outreach

Throughout the year, AIDS Outreach seeks to help students within the organization and the campus at large understand the issues, medically and socially, of those people living with HIV/AIDS. Student volunteers went to the Calcutta House to visit patients with HIV/AIDS and the group provided information during AIDS Awareness week at the end of the fall 2008 semester.

Alpha Chi Rho

Nicknamed "Crow", Alpha Chi Rho works hard to maintain academic excellence. This fraternity also engages in community and social service, both on and off the campus. During the fall semester, Alpha Chi Rho worked with Late Night La Salle to host Casino Night.

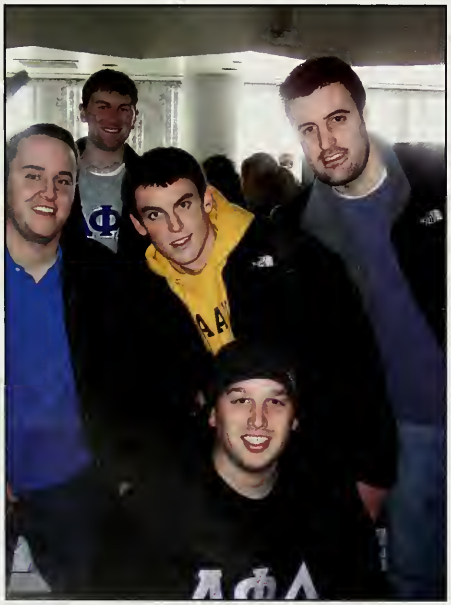
Alpha Epsilon Delta

Alpha Epsilon Delta is the Pre-Med Honor Society, available for students that hope to attend medical school post-La Salle. This honor society exists internationally and is the largest honor society for pre-med students.

Alpha Kappa Delta & Aplha Phi Sigm

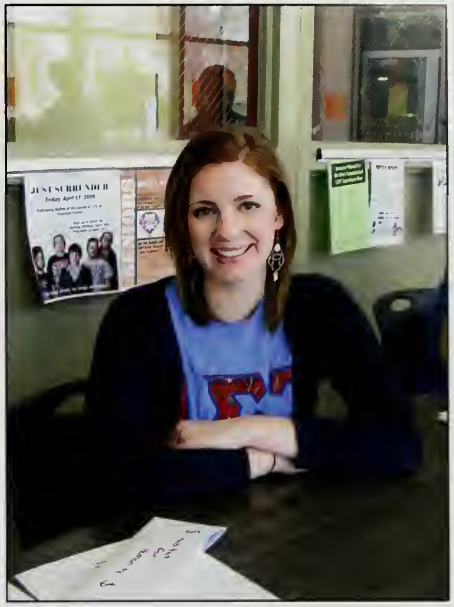
Alpha Kappa Delta is the honor society for students studying within the Sociology field. Alpha Phi Sigma is the honor society for students studying Criminal Justice. Both organizations work to promote scholarship in Sociology and Criminal Justice. By teaming up with faculty, students gain more from the fields of Sociology and Criminal Justice, with experts to guide them in their scholarly pursuits.

Alpha Phi Delta



Alpha Phi Delta fraternity is an Italian heritage-based fraternity. From its humble beginnings, A.P.D. has welcomed in young men who had the desire to better themselves and their communities. The La Salle University A.P.D. chapter has been recognized by the National Fraternity for its outstanding support to their community and community services.

Alpha Sigma



In the Spring '09 semester, Alpha Sigma Tau accomplished a lot. This sorority gained seven fun and valuable sisters during recruitment. The sisters also worked together to raise money for the family of the police officer that was lost in the La Salle neighborhood. The sorority held their annual Habitat for Humanity Pancake Dinner, successfully raising funds for that honorable charity.

Alpha Theta Alpha

Alpha Theta Alpha, A.T.A., is a sorority that works for unity and growth through the bonds made within the sisterhood. The organization works to improve campus life and life outside the campus. They achieve this through a wide variety of service activities. This year, the group was present at many events on campus, including the Health Fair and Alcohol Awareness Week.

American Marketing Association

The goal of the American Marketing Association, A.M.A. is to provide members with the opportunity to put into practice marketing skills and to netowkr marketing professionals through a variety of social and professional programs and activities.

This year, A.M.A. is proud to have hosted Marketing Week, the 4th Annual Business Etiquette Dinner, Networking Night, a Phillies Bus Trip, and a Dodge Ball for Diabetes Fundraiser that raised $600.

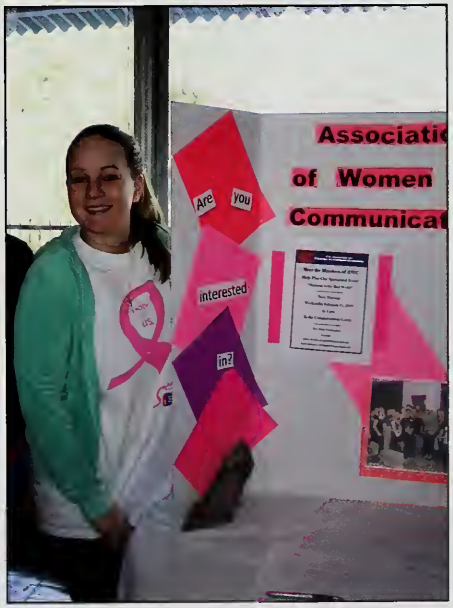
A/A.S.I.A.

The American/Asian Students' Intercultural Association, A/A.S.I.A., allows students to meet and create an awareness of Asian culture amongst themselves. By participating and creating events on campus like the Annual Multi-Cultural show and the World Cultures Fair, this group spreads Asian traditions to the entire La Salle community.

Anime Club

The Anime Club, a diverse and friendly group, holds meetings twice a week, for the convenience of both commuters and residents. Two to three series are watched during these meetings over the course of a semester. Planned every year is a trip to Otakon, a convention in Baltimore. Fundraisers for the trip included raffle sales and a Super Smash Brothers video game tournament.

Association for Women in Communication



The Association for Women in Communication is a national organization that promotes the advancement of women in all fields of communication. La Salle's student chapter of the Association for Women in Communication works with the Communication department to create opportunities for students to network with women in the field, resume work shops and many other events.

BackPac

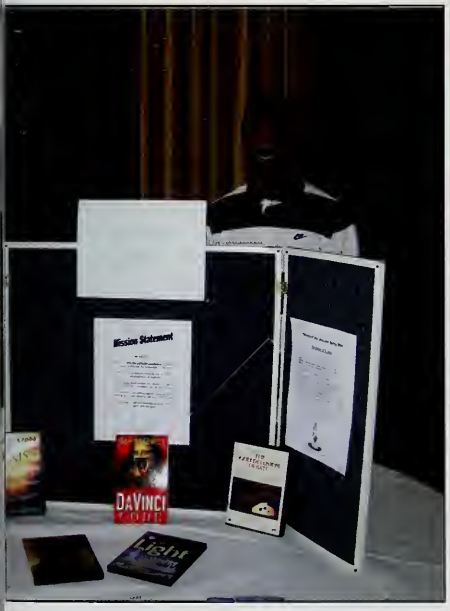
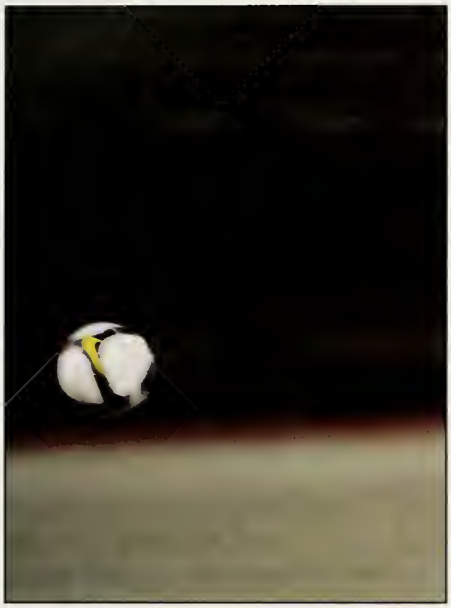
Christian Cares, Issues and Concerns



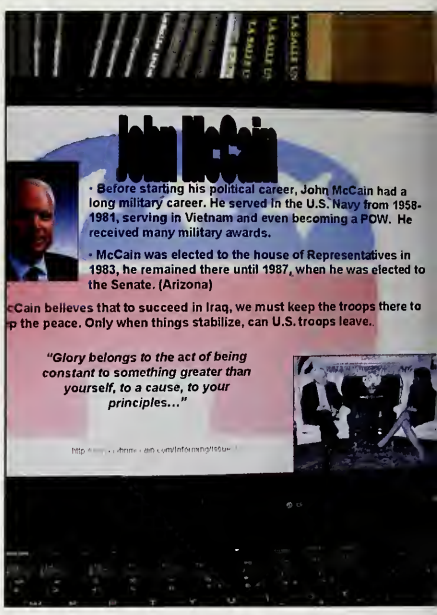
Christian Cares, Issues, and Concerns is a ministry focused on providing the La Salle Community with relevant information pertaining to the Holy Bible. This group seeks to address issues that many youth in this generation face and discuss topics in an open-forum setting. They also provide opportunities for community service as well as true Christian fellowship amongst La Salle University students and staff.

Club Soccer



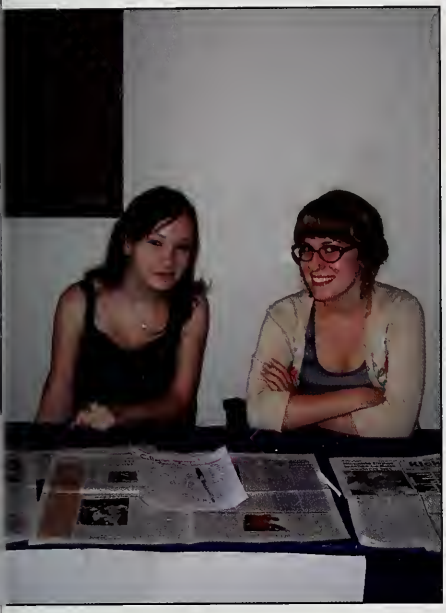
Club Soccer provides the opportunity for individuals with a common passion for soccer to play on a recreational and competitive intercollegiate team. Club Soccer operates on a less demanding practice and competition schedule than does its Varsity counterpart. It, nevertheless, affords members the collective opportunity to represent their university through athletic competition in a positive manner.

College Republicans



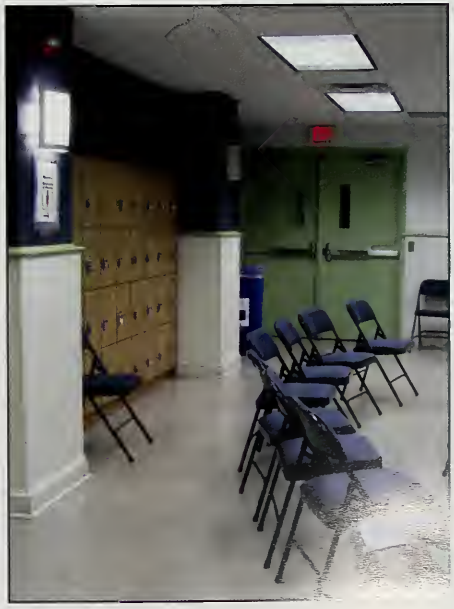
The College Republicans is an organization that allows students of similar political persuasions to meet and discuss topics of interest. The chapter has an extensive political network throughout the city of Philadelphia including contacts with other University chapters, the offices of the state senators, and local politicians. Some of the members have interned for former Senator Rick Santorum, Congressman Mike Fitzpatrick, and at the White House.

Collegian



The Collegian, led by editor in chief, Sam Fran Scavuzzo, had a busy and highly productive year, covering events like the 2008 Presidential Election, construction, and budget cuts, among many other issues. This year, the Collegian won two first-place awards from the Pennsylvania Newspaper Association Foundation. The first award was for ongoing news coverage during the 2008 Presidential election. The second award was for a review written about Jerry Lewis.

C.A.O.S.



The Commuter and Off Campus Student Association, or C.A.O.S. as it is fondly known, is geared toward commuting students in the La Salle community. They provide commuters with fun activities like pool tournaments and baseball outings. This organization also acts as a link for all commuters with the Lasallian life, showing them that even if they are not residents, they can have n active campus life.

Cross Cultural Association

Cross Cultural Association, C.C.A., allows students from all backgrounds and cultures to come together and educate the community about the different cultures present. C.C.A. does this in various ways by sponsoring evens like the World Cultures Fair in the fall semester.

Delta Phi Epsilon

The Epsilon Zeta chapter of Delta Phi Epsilon at La Salle University sponsored and took part in several campus events this year. In November, the chapter raised over $1,300 with their annual Deepher Dude competition and in the spring, sponsored Eating Disorders Awareness Week with A.T.A., as well as Alcohol Awareness Week.

Delta Sigma Phi

Delta Sigma Phi takes pride in participating in campus events hosted by both, other Greek organizations and non-Greeks. For the second year in a row, Delta Sigma Phi won the Greek God competition, capping off another successful Greek Week, which they also won.

On April 18th the fraternity held their eighth annual Anti-Hate Softball tournament to raise money for the Matthew Shepherd Foundation.

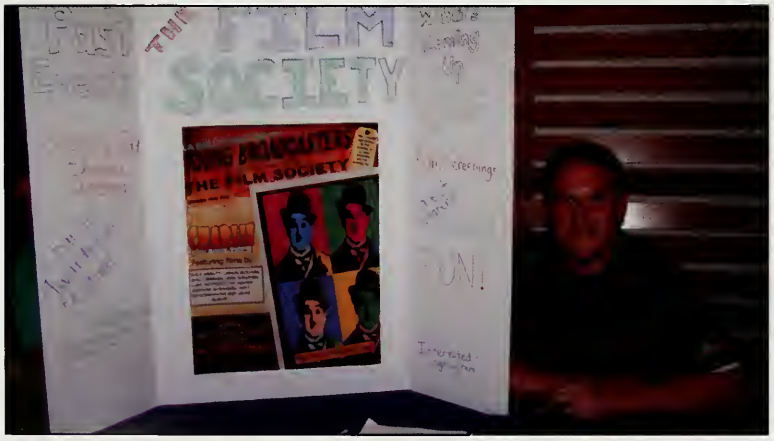
Explorer Yearbook

The Explorer staff works hard all year to create the book in your hands. Led by advisor, Dawn Wanner, each year the staff excels and overcomes many challenges to produce a high quality keepsake, documenting students' memories at La Salle. Visible at many campus events, the staff gathers as much information as possible, making the Explorer a yearbook for the entire La Salle community.

Explorers For Life

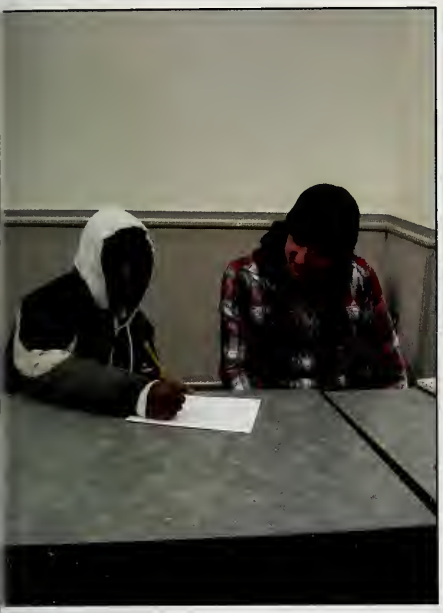
Explorers for Life is the pro-life group on campus that works hard to promote the right to life for all beings. This year, Explorers for Life attended the "Walk for Life" in Washington D.C., held every January, and the "Stand Up for Life" dinner in November in Philadelphia. This group also worked with other groups to bring Sr. Helen Prejean to the campus in March.

Film Society



Film Society is an organization open to anyone on campus. The goal of this organization is to promote an appreciation for "the art of cinema" among students. A highly anticipated event this organization works to create every year is the Charlie Awards, a film contest where students can submit original films.

Foster Care Tutoring



This F.O.C.U.S. group is a collaborative program with the Department of Human Services. Meeting on campus weekly, F.C.T. tutors develop one-on-one relationships with children by offering their academic and mentor support. The group offers a variety of independent and group activities to participate in each week, and have made more accessible the University's invaluable resources through additional cultural and academic presentations.

Gamma Phi Beta

Gamma Phi Beta is dedicated to fostering a nurturing environment that provides women the opportunity to achieve their potential through lifelong commitment to intellectual growth, individual worth and service to humanity.

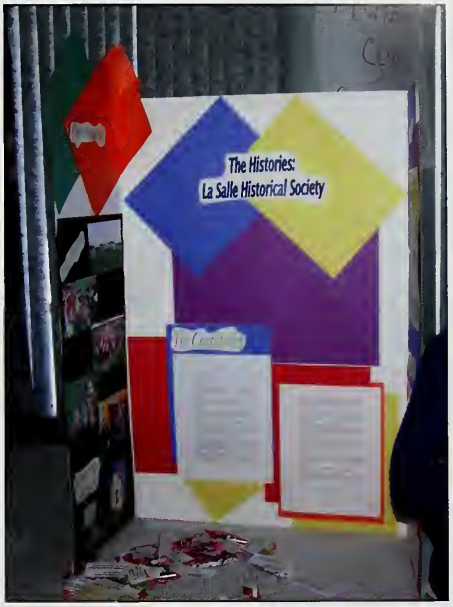
Gamma Sigma Sigma

Working throughout the year towards their group motto "Unity and Service", the sisters of Gamma Sigma Sigma dedicate much time to their philanthropies. They participated in the MS Walk and the March for Dimes, as well as raised money for the Sunshine Foundation, the Red Cross and the American Cancer Society.

Grimoire

The Grimoire is a literary anthology created by La Salle students. Students can submit original pieces to the Grimoire to be printed in this student creation. Submissions include short stories, poems and essays. Students can also get involved in the Grimoire by helping to edit and layout this anthology.

Historical Society



Historical Society works among the community to foster an interest in history. This group is open to all students and works to help produce "the Histories", a collection of historical essays created by students and faculty. The Historical Society also works to sponsor historical trips, as they did this year with a trip to Gettysburg.

Honors Board

Honors Board acts as a student advisory panel to the Honors Program to better assist students in that area. This organization exists as a way for students to further engage in academic pursuits outside the classroom setting.

Ice Hockey Club

La Salle Ice Hockey '08-'09

The La Salle University Ice Hockey club has been in existence since 1972. They are a member of the Great Northeast Collegiate Hockey Conference at the Division II level of the American Collegiate Hockey Association, playing teams like Rutgers University and the University of Scranton. The Explorers play at The Rink at Old York Road in Elkins Park. This year they paved their way to the playoffs for the second straight season.

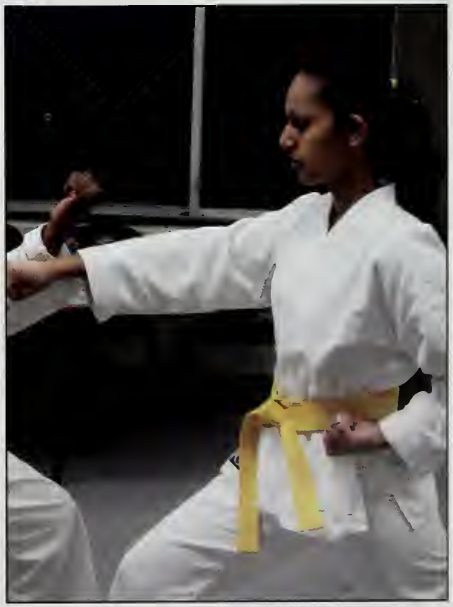
Infraternity Sorority Council

Interfraternity-Sorority Council, or I.F.S.C. as it is commonly known as, is the Coordinating body for all campus fraternity and sorority chapters. Members of all Greek organizations work with I.F.S.C. to solve issues facing the Greek community and to assist each other in achieving the individual goals of all Greek organizations. Greek Week, and the Greek God and Goddess contest is a big even coordinated by I.F.S.C.

Jazz and Pep Bands

Jazz and Pep Bands combine to play music for much of the campus to enjoy. Performing at basketball games, the bands get the crowds excited and ready to cheer the Explorers to victory. Concerts are also performed in both semesters to showcase these students' musical talents.

Karate Club



The goal of La Salle's Shotokan Karate club is to help students train their body to be strong, and their mind and spirit to be patient, in order to become the best human beings they can. This group strives not only to teach karate techniques, but moreover, to do their best to help guide members in the understanding of what it means to be a true martial artist. This is a daily process that should be as routine as waking up in the morning.

La Salle Army R.O.T.C. Detachment

The La Salle Army R.O.T.C. Detachment is designed to train the future warrior leaders of the United States Army. This detachment will teach leadership and traditional American and military values to students.

La Salle Singers

The La Salle Singers practice twice a week to perform a variety of selections ranging from popular or Broadway tunes to classical pieces in Latin or German. They perform around campus at freshman convocation, basketball games and other special events. They also perform for the community at Camilla Hall at Immaculata University and Moss Rehab at Einstein Hospital. No experience is necessary and all voices are welcome.

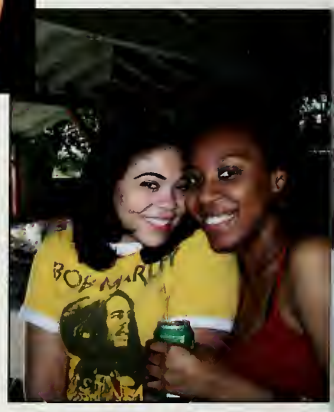
WEXP is La Salle's student-run radio program. This semester, WEXP hosted WEXPfest, a Battle of the Bands and participated in a marathon that students could enjoy live.

Young Broadcasters

Young Broadcasters meets in the Communication Center and aids the Communication department's group, La Salle 56, to produce programs for La Salle's tv station. The Young Broadcasters work to learn more about the art of being in broadcasting.

Young Democrats

This year, the Young Democrats were busy. Some members volunteered at the Obama campaign offices in the city and attended Obama rallies at City Hall. Other members encouraged students to register to vote and later, to vote on Election Day. A highlight from this busy organization included the rally that they hosted, which brought various celebrities to campus including Phillies Shorstop Jimmy Rollins, PA Governor Ed Rendell, Mayor Michael Nutter and actresses, Morgan Fairchild and Debra Messing.



Information about the student organizations came directly from the student groups. However, some information came from the Division of Student Affairs website

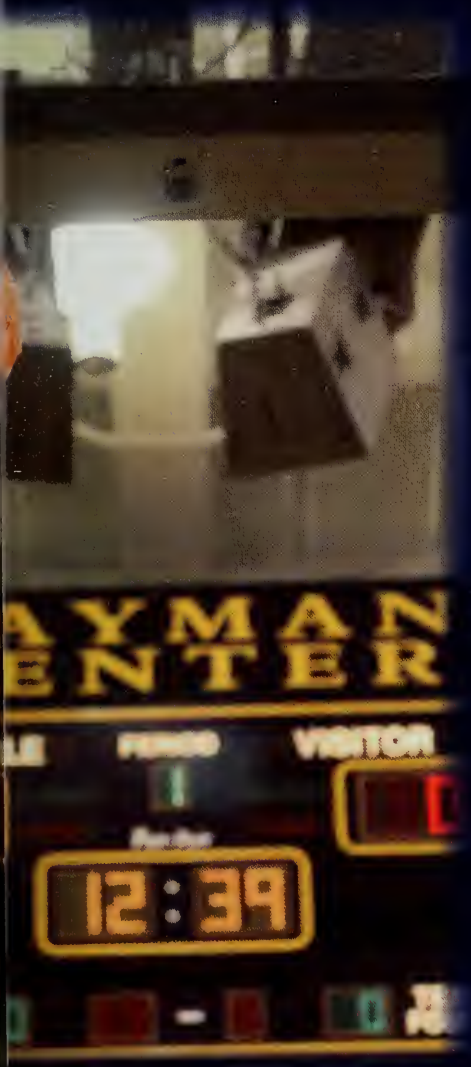
Grounded through Perseverance



La Salle athletes are one of a kind, persevering both on and off the field to be leaders in the community. Always working and striving to be the best, they work hard throughout the year to succeed academically as well as physically.

These pages illustrate the hard work La Salle athletes consistently put forth, competing in sports like field hockey, basketball, cross country and track. Their accomplishments are numerous, proving that hard work and perseverance grant success

Because of the constant effort athletes give, this section is truly "Grounded Through Perseverance", setting La Salle athletes apart from all others.

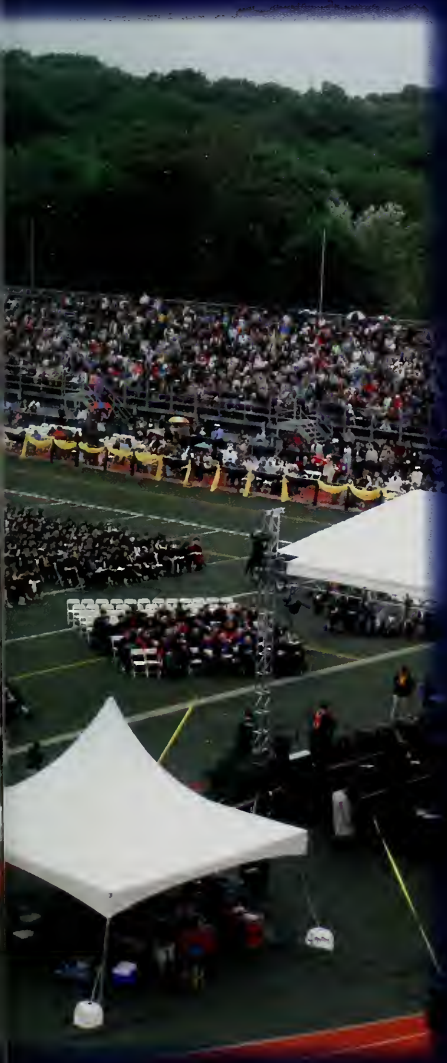
Grounded through the Future



A perfect word to describe senior year is change. With all the changes that students face in senior year: final classes, internships, jobs, graduation, graduate school, apartment hunting and meeting new people, "Grounded Through Change" is the perfect way to describe this fast-paced year.

However, another word often persists to be thrown around senior year: future. Students are often asked about their future plans and all the changes they experience are routed in these plans and endeavors. Because of this, more importantly, senior year is "Grounded Through the Future".

Whatever the future holds, one can bet that La Salle graduates are ready to tackle the world, from the experiences they have gained through their time at La Salle, both in and out of the classrooms. Congratulations to all 2009 graduates!

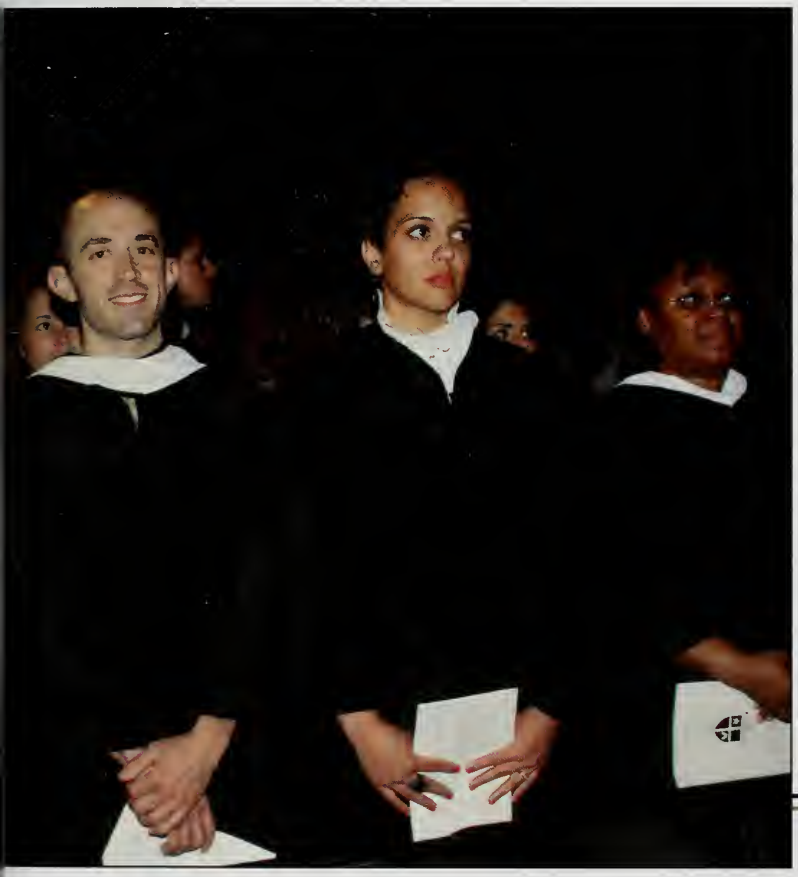
Baccalaureate Mass 2009

Every year, the Baccalaureate mass and the Graduation Gala are different and unique for each graduating class.

This year, the Class of 2009 held their Baccalaureate mass on campus, in the Hayman Center on Saturday, May 16. The Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul in Center City previously was the location for the Baccalaureate mass. This change allowed graduates to invite more guests to the mass, improved parking and allowed guests to go right from the mass at the Hayman Center straight to the Graduation Gala.



Graduation Gala

The Graduation Gala, now in its second year and sponsored by the Division of Student Affairs, the Office for University Advancement and the Alumni Association, was held on Saturday, May 16, immediately following the Baccalaureate mass. A total of 400 graduates and their guests attended the event.

The Gala was held on the Main Quad, allowing students to mingle with each other and guests one last time on La Salle's campus before graduating the next day.

For all your hard work and support this year!
The Center won't be the same without you.

Good luck and we'll miss you,
Chris, Dawn and Julie

Your diploma means a future without boundaries,
A world that's full of energy and fun.
So as you reach for all life has to offer,
Remember that you're second to no one.

Pursue your goals, yet keep your loved ones close,
As you utilize your talent and ambition.
Let your friends and family give you their suport,
And you'll master every challenging transition.

And always, Alyssa, know you can achieve
The things you really want, if you believe.

We Are Very Proud of You!

Love Always,
Daddy, Mommy, Maryssa (Reh),
Apryll (Princess), & Chobi

One would say, "What more could one wish for"?
We wished for you all the world has to offer.
You melted our hearts from the moment we laid eyes on you!
In the past 21 years Dad and I have been amazed at all you have accomplished. You are beautiful, determined and ...

AWESOME!!!!

We feel so blessed you chose us to be your parents!!!!!
We are so proud of you!!!

Garrett Patrick Pollard

We are so very proud of you and all of your accomplishments…

To laugh often and much
To win respect of intelligent people and the affection of children
To earn the appreciation of honest critics and endure the betrayal of false friends
To appreciate beauty
To find the best in others
To leave the world a little better
Whether by a healthy child, a garden patch or a redeemed social condition
To know even one life has breathed easier because you have lived.
This is the meaning of success.
-Ralph Waldo Emerson

Thank God for your many blessings.

Sean Luciano Fitts

Congratulations!
Your family is so proud of you.

Sean Luciano Fitts

Once upon a time there was a little girl named Kate who had long curly blond hair. One day she went off to school full of excitement and eager to learn. She studied hard, sang, danced, played the clarinet and piano, and discovered theater. She traveled to Washington, D.C., Spain, China, and Australia. Everywhere she went she made friends. She grew and grew in knowledge and grace until all too soon she became a beautiful young woman.

Not "The End" –
But "The Beginning!"
We are so proud of you! All our love goes with you wherever you may go.

Volume 65 of the Explorer Yearbook was printed by Taylor Publishing Company. Emmy Kachel acted as the Taylor representative to La Salle University. The initial preparation, cover design and final assembly of the yearbook took place at the Taylor plant in Dallas, Tx. 800 copies of the yearbook were printed. The book is made up of 256 pages of 100# gloss enamel paper printed in four color Kamori Digital press. The cover of the 2009 yearbook is fabric blue matte with clear varnish accented with gold silkscreen and the book has gold dust end sheets.

Carl Wolf Studio, the photography division of Herff Jones, produced all the senior portraits in the book, as well as many athletic, academic and candid photos. The remainder of the pictures were taken by the Explorer staff, Sara Allen, '08, submitted by individual members of the La Salle University community, donated to the yearbook by Unversity Communications and the University Archives.

The "Grounded Through Change" theme was developed by the Explorer Yearbook staff and the layouts within the book were designed by the staff using Taylor's Studio Works Online Program. The 2009 Explorer is an official publication of La Salle University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and reproduction of any portion of this book, either in part, or its entirety, is prohibited without written consent of the University.
